House gives Bush authority for war with Iraq

WASHINGTON — President Bush praised the House of Representatives for voting to give him authority to go to war to disarm Iraq Thursday, calling it “a debate and a result that all Americans can be proud of.” The House voted 296-133 to give Bush the authority to use U.S. military force to make Iraq comply with U.N. resolutions requiring it to give up weapons of mass destruction. It requires Bush to declare to Congress either before or within 48 hours after beginning military action that diplomatic efforts to enforce those resolutions have failed.

One of the most important tasks of Task Force Panther is protecting the soldiers and the base camp that they occupy. Many units participate in this task including the Military Police, the Airborne Field Artillery Regiment and most of all the Air Defense Artillery Regiment.

WASHINGTON — Attorney General John Ashcroft vowed today to find the sources of “terrorist blood money” and shut them down.

Appearing at a press conference in Chicago, the attorney general announced that a grand

Army, Make-A-Wish grants wish to terminally ill boy

By Michelle Bard
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — With help of the U.S. Army, the Make-A-Wish Foundation was able to grant a 10-year-old freckled faced boy with a terminal illness his greatest wish — to become a soldier.

To honor that wish, the sergeant major of the Army and the Office of the Secretary of Defense helped swear in Justin Bryce of Binghamton, N.Y., as an honorary soldier and then promoted him to sergeant in a Pentagon ceremony Oct. 7.

Bryce's 20-year-old brother, Pvt. Raymond Bryce, a 10th Mountain Division artilleryman at Fort Drum, N.Y., was flown in to surprise his little brother and family attending the ceremony. The older Bryce said he thinks he inspired his brother's wish to become an Army soldier.

"I think I had something to do with it. I think he leaned more toward it after I joined," Bryce said.

The ceremony kicked off with the official swearing in of Bryce as an honorary soldier by Lt. Gen. John Craddock, the senior military assistant to the Secretary of Defense. "The Army gets better every time we enlist a new American," Craddock said prior to the swearing in.

Bryce was then given a custom uniform with Military District of Washington insignias, a challenge coin, black beret and certificate.

Sgt. Maj. of the Army Jack Tilley assisted in the ceremony and presented Bryce with other special Army mementos including various Sergeant Major of the Army coins, an Army briefcase, a bag full of Army footballs, a Sept. 11 remembrance coin and an Army pen. He told Bryce, as the boy eagerly held his hand out, "As long as you're a good soldier, this pen will never run out of ink."

Tilley said this experience held special meaning for him.

"I have an exceptional family (member), so to be able to play a small part in something that makes you feel so good...I think it's something everybody should do," Tilley said.

Bryce was promoted from private to sergeant following the promotion orders signed by Tilley. Bryce became confused at one point in the ceremony and asked, "What's a promotion?"

"We're going to make you from a private to a sergeant so you get an increase in pay. But not much!" Tilley said.

Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld also participated in the ceremony and awarded Justin with a Secretary of Defense hat and pin. He praised Bryce on his advancement in the ranks.

"Congratulations on your elevation to sergeant," Rumsfeld said.

After the ceremony, Rumsfeld met with Bryce's parents, younger sister and two older brothers and welcomed them to the Pentagon. He also expressed his appreciation to Bryce for choosing to become an Army soldier.

"Thank you for choosing the Army for your wish," he said.

Jon Rosa, Make-A-Wish's public relations and development coordinator, out of Kensington, Md., said doctors, family members, and the children who have a life-threatening illness can make wish referrals.

In Bryce's case, the hospital in Wilmington, Del., where Bryce was seeking treatment made the call to the foundation and official word of Bryce's wish was made to them Oct. 3. Rosa said it was urgent to grant the wish "as soon as possible."

"We wanted to provide Justin with some quality time with his family in these last stages of his illness," he said.

Rosa said the foundation has a policy of not disclosing the illnesses of clients.

In addition to the swearing-in and promotion ceremony, Bryce also had a full day of "training" at the Pentagon, Fort Belvoir, Va. and the U.S. Coast Guard Station in Baltimore, Md., Oct. 8 to get some hands-on experience.

"He really seemed to enjoy himself," Rosa said.

Tilley said he felt honored to assist in the ceremony and grant Bryce's wish.

"We just came out today to make him an honorary sergeant, give him his own uniform and tell him we would do anything we could to help out. It's the least we could do," he said.

"There is no moral distinction between those who carry out terrorist attacks and those who knowingly finance terrorist attacks," Ashcroft said. "We will ensure that both the terrorists and their financiers meet the same swift, certain justice of the United States of America."

Documents found in the Benevolence International Foundation's Bosnia offices in March, he said, "show the American people and show the world, for the first time, tangible proof of the founding of the world's most dangerous terrorist network and the oath of allegiance its members pledge.

"It is chilling that the origins of al Qaeda were discovered in a charity claiming to do good," the attorney general said.

Benevolence International Foundation is a tax-exempt, purportedly charitable organization with offices in Illinois, Pakistan, Bosnia and other locations, Ashcroft said. The indictment charges that Arnaout operated the charity for more than a decade to support terrorism using contributions from Muslim Americans and others.

Ashcroft said the most disturbing allegation in the case, to him, is that Arnaout deceived Muslims, who are obliged by their religion to donate to legitimate charities.

"It is sinister to prey on good hearts to fund the works of evil," he said.

The grand jury charged Arnaout with one count of engaging in a racketeering enterprise; one count of conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists; two counts of money laundering; two counts of mail fraud; and one count of wire fraud. If convicted on all the charges, Arnaout could face a maximum 90 years' imprisonment without the possibility of parole.

Arnaout is also charged with co-mingling real charitable donations with contributions given to support armed violence, Ashcroft said.

"In order to deceive donors and to guarantee the success of his operation," he said, "Arnaout is charged with concealing at all times from the government, the general public and a considerable number of donors his relationship with al Qaeda; its leader, Osama bin Laden; and other terrorist organizations."

about possible terrorist attacks against U.S. interests, including an alleged plot targeting American schoolteachers and their schools within Kuwait. The concern was reinforced Thursday when French and U.S. investigators reached a preliminary conclusion that Sunday's explosion aboard a French oil tanker in Yemen was the work of terrorists. One crewman was killed in the blast, which spilled thousands of gallons of oil into the sea. A junior officer aboard the French tanker reported a boat quickly approaching shortly before the explosion. It was not immediately known if the group has direct ties to al Qaeda.

FREEDOM'S VOICES

What do you think of Bonds now that he's breaking through?

Bottom line

By Spc.
Alfredo
Jimenez Jr.

@us.army.mil

It's amazing how people will change their opinion on someone just because they do something historic or mind-boggling. A couple of years ago, Barry Bonds was being called everything Ken Griffey Jr. is today and it was getting worse.

Despite helping the Pittsburgh Pirates to three consecutive NL East titles in the early 90s and despite winning two NL MVP awards, he was still being marked as selfish, arrogant player with a terrible temper. The name-calling really took off after he bolted the declining Pirates for the resurgent San Francisco Giants in 1993.

Well, I don't know Bonds any more than I know my cousins in Modesto, but from what I have witnessed throughout the last 10 years, those people who persistently are knocking him down really don't know him much either.

Writers and Pirate fans condemned Bonds for leaving Pittsburgh.

Heck, if there was another place that paid me more money for my writing skills than the Army does, I would leave too. Besides, Bonds said part of the reason he left Pittsburgh was because he wanted to play for the same team that his godfather, Willie Mays, did. Again, if there was a brother, sister, father, anybody related to the Jimenez household stationed somewhere and I wanted to experience the army with them, I would call my branch manager immediately.

Writers and players detested him for showing lack of respect and closing himself to them, making it seem like all he cared about was Barry Bonds.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

He is no different from every player playing baseball, basketball, football and hockey. It happens everyday. What? Do you think Michael Jordan listened to Phil Jackson or Jackson listened to Jordan? Who do you think runs the Minnesota Vikings? Coach Tice or Randy Moss?

I don't know what happens in the Giants' dugout or locker room, and I surely don't know if any of the rumors are true, but one thing I do know is that Bonds isn't alone in showing a bad attitude.

Maybe if he was an average All Star player, he would be left alone, because no one cares about them. No, we want to hear all the juicy details of the megastar. Is Mike Piazza gay? He says no. Is Jordan getting a divorce? The couple is back together. Is A-Rod still single and what is he doing with all that cash? Who knows?

Writers and players are beginning to love Bonds.

The last two years have been phenomenal. Not only did he shatter the single-season mark for home runs (73), he has won a batting title (.372 this year), he has broken the base-on-balls record twice (198 this year), and has won a record fourth MVP (he will win his fifth this year), and has the Giants three wins from reaching the World Series for the first time since 1989.

It's funny how people change their mind about somebody. Two weeks ago, Bonds was a great player, but a perennial playoff loser (0-6 in series) with a .196 batting average.

Now, he's being called the greatest player since Babe Ruth, or perhaps ever.

Humph, wonder what he will be called next week if the Giants falter to the St. Louis Cardinals.

unit concentrates on situational awareness for TF Panther. They use the Avenger and its radar to identify incoming aircraft. However the system is not just equipped with radar, it also has a built in 50 Caliber Machine Gun known as the (M3P) used to shoot down enemy aircraft.

"I am very pleased with the work that my soldiers are doing. Motivation is high and my soldiers are doing what they are trained to do, protecting the base camps," said Douglas. "Our motto that we live by is 'Everybody goes, everybody fights, nobody quits,'" he said. "This motto stresses that we are all in this together."

C Battery, 3/4 ADAR has served in Desert Storm and part of their unit has served in Kosovo and on Bright Star in Egypt.

Sgt. 1st Class Thomas J. Montgomery III, Platoon Sgt, C Battery said, "I give a lot of credit to each and every soldier out here. They are dealing with the harsh conditions and are also working well together as a team."

The soldiers of C Battery 3/4 ADAR had to qualify on the Avenger at Fort Bragg, N.C., before deployment. It takes a lot of training, and according to Montgomery, all of the soldiers have the skills used to set the standards for training.

Soldiers of the ADAR feel it is a great honor to be part of the unit because they are the only airborne qualified ADAR Battalion in the world and are the most decorated unit in the military according to Douglas.

"I am glad that I am part of this unit," said Pvt. Darwin A. Martinez, Avenger Gunner, C Battery.

Martinez has been in the Army for two years and says he is proud to be serving here in Afghanistan. He also says that it is nice to be able to be part of the proactive fight in the war on terrorism. He says this allows him to feel more like a soldier than he would be at home where he would not be directly involved.

"I rely on my leadership to help me everyday. They teach me to be confident in myself that helps me improve on my job skills," said Martinez.

He and other soldiers from C Battery guard the perimeter of Kandahar Airfield. They say that they know their presence is making a difference because there has not been any incidents and the base camp is safe.

"Having a clear mind, being focused and paying attention to details is what we as soldiers need to do to be ready for our jobs," said Martinez. "I know that I will be ready if anything were to happen, thanks to my leadership and training."

U.S. team takes CISM golf crown

By Master Sgt. Steve Miller
Army News Service

FORT BLISS, Texas—The United States held off a challenge from South Africa during the final round Oct. 5 to claim the CISM North American Regional Golf Championship here.

The CISM, or Conseil International du Sport Militaire, sanctions international military championships in a variety of sports. Canada and South Africa joined their U.S. hosts for this tournament, in which officials said the emphasis was on cooperation and camaraderie, rather than competition.

The U.S. team consisted of the top golfers from the U.S. Armed Forces Golf Championships which ended at Fort Bliss Sept. 28.

The Army won two of the top three individual categories during the championships.

Pfc. Christopher Douglas from Fort Bragg, N.C., shot a 3-under-par 69 on the final day to become the overall Armed Forces winner and take home the title in the open division. Mark Johnson, a lieutenant colonel from Fort Sam Houston, Texas, garnered the Army's other individual title in winning the senior division by a whopping 13 strokes. His 4-under-par 284 easily beat the Air Force's top contender. Six open golfers and the top four golfers each from the senior and women's divisions made the U.S. team that faced other 14-member teams from Canada and South

Schmidt, Aurilia, Giants open big-time series lead

ST. LOUIS — Rich Aurilia, Jason Schmidt and the San Francisco Giants set down the Cardinals without much of a fight.

Aurilia homered twice, Schmidt pitched shutout ball into the eighth inning and the Giants shut down St. Louis 4-1 Thursday night for a 2-0 lead in the NL championship series.

A day after the teams nearly came to blows in a noisy opener at Busch Stadium, there were no hostilities. Barry Bonds was quiet aside from overrunning a fly ball in left field, but the Giants didn't need their slugger as — for the first time in franchise history — they opened a postseason series with consecutive road victories.

Aurilia kept up his power surge with his fourth homer of this year's playoffs, connecting on Woody Williams' fourth pitch of the game. Schmidt made the lead stand up, helped by another key play from Kenny Lofton.

Lofton, in the middle of Game 1's skirmish and booed because of it, caught a fly ball in short center field and threw out J.D. Drew at the plate to end the third inning.

The Cardinals finally scored on a pinch-hit homer by Eduardo Perez with two outs in the eighth. Robb Nen got four outs for his second save of the series.

Ramon Martinez, who replaced Aurilia at shortstop in a double switch, had a suicide-squeeze bunt in the ninth for insurance.

This Busch-whacking complete, the Giants headed home to Pacific Bell Park for Game 3 Saturday. Russ Ortiz will start for San Francisco against Chuck Finley.

All was calm at the ballpark following Wednesday night's fracas. Managers Tony La Russa and Dusty Baker were each fined $500, and non-roster players — many of whom left the dugout to join the pushing and shoving — were banned from the bench.

Umpire crew chief Randy Marsh, after talking with commissioner Bud Selig and other baseball officials, decided not to issue a warning to the clubs about inside pitches. There were no problems, either, dispelling thoughts that the rivals had become Arch Enemies.

Schmidt didn't need to buzz anyone to silence St. Louis. He gave up four hits and struck out eight, reaching 98 mph with his fastball. It was fine redemption for him, having lost to Atlanta this month in his only other playoff start.

Aurilia's big night was even more unexpected.

After hitting 37 home runs in 2001, he dipped down to 15 this season. Batting at the top of the lineup and mainly ahead of Bonds, his dropoff hurt the Giants.

But Aurilia homered twice as San Francisco beat the Braves to win the opening round, and broke loose against Williams for his first two-homer game of the year.

Did you know ...

Both of the AL finalists (Twins and Angels) have a payroll less than half the Yankees'.

In fact, the Twins' payroll entering the season ($40.2 million) wasn't even one-third as high as the Yankees' ($125.9 million).

By the way, if this trend holds, we'd see a Cardinals-Twins World Series, with the Twins winning it. But we went back through 1977, and there were no postseasons in the last quarter-century in which the team with the lowest payroll won every series.

Africa.

For the CISM tourney, team points were awarded on a 3-2-1 basis for the first three rounds Oct. 2-4. The U.S. team won each round to assume a 9-5 lead heading to the final round, with Canada third holding 4 points. However, the team points possible doubled for the final round, meaning South Africa could have tied the U.S. team at 11 and forced a playoff, if they'd won the last round to earn 6 points and if the U.S. finished third with 2 points.

But the U.S. team maintained its lead and earned the 6 final-round points to win the tourney with 15. South Africa picked up 4 points for placing second in the final round and finished with 9. Canada earned 2 points for third and finished with 6.

Golfers competed in teams of three or six, one or two for each nation, during the four rounds, which featured a different format each day.

The first round was a better ball format in which the better score among the two golfers was recorded. The second round featured an alternating shot format in which the paired golfers alternated shots until they holed the ball. The third round was a scramble in which the two golfers picked the location of the better shot until they holed the ball.

The final round featured individual match play in which the golfers competed against one another in teams of three. The winner is the person winning the most holes of the 18 on a hole-by-hole basis.

Each team selected a sportsmanship award recipient from one of the other teams. The Canadian team chose Jim Day, a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy.

"It was like no time had gone by. I remembered them from last year, and they remembered me," said Day, who took part in his second straight CISM tourney. "The best part was the singles match play during the final round. I got my rematch against Jeff Elliot (of Canada), who beat me last year. I got a chance and pulled it out."

South Africa chose Malcolm Ferguson, a first-time CISM participant and corporal in the Canadian air force, as its sportsmanship awardee.

"The friendships you make are the best—it's amazing. I met some of them last year when we hosted the U.S. team for the CISM tournament in Borden (Ontario)," Ferguson said. "It's always great to see people you've got a friendship and bond with. This has been a great experience."

The U.S. team chose 54-year-old Andre Keyser, a flight sergeant with the South African air force, who also participated in his second straight CISM tourney.

"The best thing is the friendships you make through sport and to see old friends again," Keyser said. "To see the guys I met last year and play with them again is wonderful. It's something I'll treasure forever. This may be my last year (at CISM). It's getting harder and harder to beat the young guys."

Next year's CISM golf tourney is set for Jacksonville, Fla., in early October.

What's going on?

What were the odds? In between postseason games, the Angels played 2,527 regular-season games over 16 seasons. And incredibly, when they finally played their next postseason game, they were facing the same starter who pitched against them in their previous postseason game on Oct. 16, 1986—Roger Clemens. Almost impossible.

So what were the odds? We didn't major in math, so we have no idea. But we do know this:

In 1986, 110 pitchers started at least four games in the American League. This year, exactly two of them were still active—Clemens and Jose Rijo (who took five years off in the middle of all that).

Speaking of Clemens, he was one of four Cy Young Award winners who started a game in this postseason. The others: Randy Johnson, Tom Glavine and Greg Maddux. Those four have won a total of 16 Cy Youngs. And here was their record in this postseason, in five starts: 25.33 IP, 40 H, 25 R, 24 ER, 16 BB, 16 K (for a 1-2 record, 8.53 ERA).
